NEWFOUNDLAND, CANADA
FOGO ISLAND INN

Newfoundland's Fogo Island measures less than 100 square miles, and its position is northerly enough that summer temperatures rarely rise above the mid-70s. In May, just in time to take advantage of the season's longer days, the 29-room Fogo Island Inn (from $550 per night) made its debut. The Canadian-born, Norway-based architect Todd Saunders created the property's two intersecting boxes of wood, glass, and concrete; together they form a striking design that overlooks the rugged coastline and the icebergs offshore. 709.658.3444, www.fogoislandinn.ca

VIRGIN GORDA, BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS
OIL NUT BAY

Earlier this year, Oil Nut Bay, the yachting and real estate development on Virgin Gorda, completed its three Cliff Suites (from $795 per night). Two of the three OBMI-designed one-bedroom accommodations measure 890 square feet, while the third—the penthouse—spans 1,334 square feet and includes Fendi Casa furnishings and a private swimming pool. All of the suites feature stone construction and grass-covered roofs that help them blend into their hillside perch. The units are available to the community's homeowners and prospective buyers, as well as to travelers seeking private villa rentals with resort-style service and amenities. 284.393.1000, www.oilnutbay.com

NAPA VALLEY, CALIF.
Auberge du Soleil
 Calistoga Ranch
 Solage Calistoga

Auberge du Soleil hotel and spa, originally designed by Michael Taylor in 1985, has updated its California wine country aesthetic with eight newly styled, South of France-inspired suites (top; from $1,000 per night) by the designer Suzanne Tucker, Taylor's protégé. In the Napa Valley town of Calistoga, nestled in a canyon, Calistoga Ranch (from $685 per night; see Smart Showings, page 33) has refreshed its 50-room property with in-room iPads, renovated outdoor shower gardens (middle), and new hiking trails. Nearby, refurbishments at the more casual Solage Calistoga (bottom; from $360 per night) include a warmer color palette, more luxurious bedding, and soaking tubs in each of its 89 rooms. 415.380.3460, www.aubergeresorts.com [S.B.]
